

PhD's in Pig and Poultry Medicine

Vetmeduni Vienna invites applications for a PhD position as early postgraduate opportunities for selected research programs within the graduate school: Preventing infectious diseases in pigs and poultry (PaP).

The university will award a 3 year funding. The salary will be in accordance with Austrian university guidelines. The collective agreement for employees at universities according to the classification given above is EUR 1.921.5 gross per month.

Applications in the following area are invited.

(For details please use link: <http://www.vetmeduni.ac.at/en/research/young-scientists>)

Code	Research Area	Principal Investigators
2013/0709 >> Job Description 2013/0709	Persistence mechanisms of Actinobacillus pleuropneumoniae	Monika Ehling-Schulz >> Abstract 2013/0709
2013/0710 >> Job Description 2013/0710	Establishing infection models for fowl adenoviruses (FAdV)	Michael Hess >> Abstract 2013/0710
2013/0711 >> Job Description 2013/0711	Coccidial antigens and the pig	Anja Joachim >> Abstract 2013/0711
2013/0712 >> Job Description 2013/0712	Porcine immune reactions during persistence of Actinobacillus pleuropneumoniae	Isabel Hennig-Pauka >> Abstract 2013/0712
2013/0713 >> Job Description 2013/0713	Persistence mechanisms of Porcine Reproductive and Respiratory Syndrome Virus	Till Rümenapf >> Abstract 2013/0713
2013/0714 >> Job Description 2013/0714	Immune response against viral infections	Armin Saalmüller >> Abstract 2013/0714

Closing date for applications: Aug. 31st 2013

A master/diploma in veterinary medicine (DVM) or a master/diploma in a life science discipline is required.

Application should contain: application and motivation letter including the project code, full CV and a letter of recommendation. Please send your application quoting the code to bewerbungen@vetmeduni.ac.at. Please execute the code to reflect, otherwise we cannot assign your application correctly.

Contact and further information to all research areas:

Prof. Michael Hess
T +43 1 25077-5150
michael.hess@vetmeduni.ac.at Vetmeduni Vienna is committed to the recruitment and advancement of female scientists. Appointments will be subjected to a pre employment screening.